Angie Fang is a senior at The Winsor School in Boston, MA. In addition to running, she enjoys playing violin with the Boston Youth Symphony and Massachusetts All-State Orchestra.

When she is feeling productive, she can be found trading on the stock market, but is ultimately happiest when baking for friends and family in her apartment kitchen.

"I'm excited to run for the Brookline Senior Center to honor my grandma with dementia. After my grandpa passed away suddenly in February 2025, she was moved to a senior home. My mom and I used to FaceTime her every night before her memory began to decline, and I still cherish all the jokes we shared over the call.

I'm grateful for the senior home staff in China for taking such good care of her, and I hope to spread that model of care.

I'm grateful that running for the Brookline Senior Center allows me to give back to the system that serves individuals like my grandma. Running for this cause is important to me because I find that it is imperative we honor senior citizens, people who've spent their entire lives contributing to society.

I believe that we should treat them well and with respect, and I hope that running for this amazing nonprofit will allow me to give back and grow closer to this amazing community!"
